About project

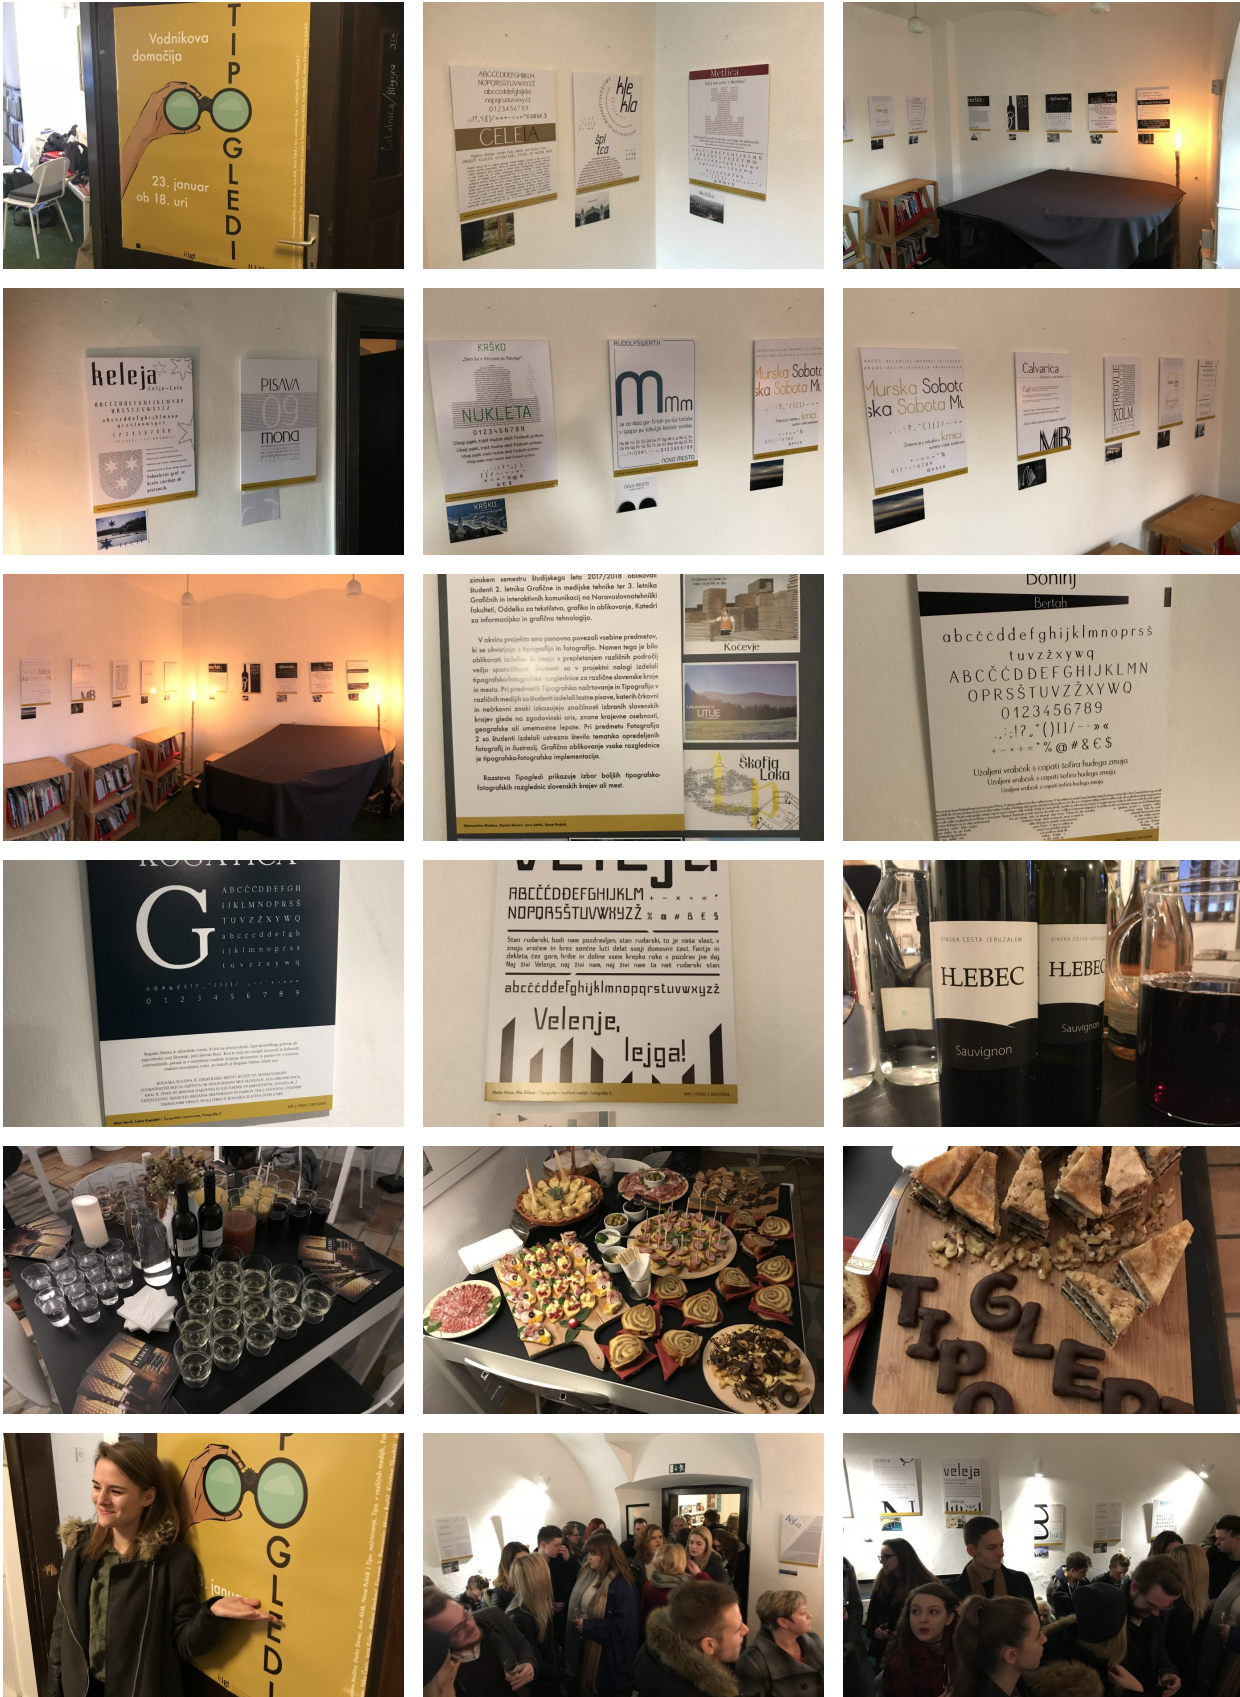

Typolooks (Slovenian: Tipogledi), is exhibition of typographic-photographic postcards of Slovenian towns and cities. Project is connection between subjects where students learn about typography and photography. The purpose was to design products where the intertwining between different design areas cause higher messaging effect. Students made typographic-photographic postcards for different Slovenian towns and cities. At the courses of Typographic Planning and Typography in Various Media students had to design their own typefaces which were related with characteristics of Slovenian towns and cities based on their historical, geographical or art aspect. At the course Photography 2 students assignment was to create thematically defined photos or illustrations. Graphic design of each postcard is typographic-photographic implementation.
