Garnir 2 has created a collection 'We like to stay at home' which represents a mix of elements that reflect the essence of home. Warmth, vase, teddy bear, blanket, button, smile and many others that share the same message: we like to stay at home.

Estera Lovrec is through her collection 'Rex-pecting the roots' sharing the concern about people not expressing feelings with pride, as she is wondering when will feelings become something positive – a positive trend. Her work reflects a mixture of different feelings and values, joined in harmony and displayed as a stylish concept of a photography series which serves as a tribute to the iconic Rexchair.

Hana Podvršič and her collection 'Phenomena' reflects on the future of our planet. She drew the inspiration from a pessimistic post-apocalyptic state of Earth, as she wants to emphasize the uniqueness of our planet, nature and human relations, which unfortunately will not be appreciated until a phenomena would happen that would change our mindset completely.

Anita Miklavčič put her childhood as a main inspiration for her womenswear sustainable collection, titled 'When I grow up'. She made a research of silhouettes, colours, stylistic elements and details of the clothes she used to wear as a child, interpreting and upgrading the elements in her own unique style. The collection is entirely made out of second hand and waste materials from Slovenian textile manufactures.

Welcome!
